

décorations militaires

Posté par fonzy - le 18 Mars 2010 à 18:42

Bonjour,

Mon père a reçu des décorations militaires et particulièrement la Médaille Militaire: mais aujourd'hui la chancellerie et les archives militaires n'ont aucune trace de cette remise de médaille. Par ailleurs il n'a pas reçu la médaille des engagés volontaires alors qu'il s'est engagé avant son appel.

Comment faire pour régulariser cette décoration qu'il a reçu ?

Merci de votre aide !

Bonsoir Fonzy et à toutes et tous les internautes,

Logiquement, ton père doit posséder un livret de médailles militaires dans lequel sont retranscrites toutes les décorations reçues au cours de ses années de service.

Parfois, on en trouve trace, également, sur le carnet militaire et les états de service.

S'il ne possède ni l'un ni l'autre, ce sera très difficile de prouver l'obtention de ses distinctions !!!

Je vais me renseigner, au SEDAC et à l'ONAC, pour savoir quelles seraient les possibilités complémentaires offertes.

Affaire à suivre...

A.F. Très Cordialement,

Khader MOULFI

Quand tu leur enverras un courrier, il faut que tu ajoutes ton propre acte d'état civil qui prouvera que tu es l'enfant d'un soldat harki. Il faut que tu es l'acte d'état civil de ton père, que tu peux demander au ministère des affaires étrangères. Il se pourrait que la BCAAM te demande son acte de décès. Quand tu fais une demande, il faut que tu précises que tu veux sa feuille d'état de service militaire, ses citations militaires et son diplôme. Avec la BCAAM tu devrais avoir des réponses, mais il met du temps pour répondre. S'il ne te donne pas de réponse, il se peut que son dossier soit classé secret défense. Renseigne toi au ministère des affaires étrangères, il se pourrait qu'il y est les informations que tu cherches. Je te laisse mon adresse internet (
